J. W. (Jay) Matthews III

Shareholder

Jay Matthews helps many types of businesses, particularly technology companies. He has a strong background in cases involving the transportation, construction and telecommunications industries.

Mr. Matthews also has a wealth of experience in complex business and technology-related disputes. He helps clients in litigation involving business torts, products liability, intellectual property and fiduciary law.

He is skilled in the important area of E-discovery, assisting businesses in producing and managing electronically stored information. Mr. Matthews has given presentations to corporations, universities and nonprofit organizations on E-discovery and is a member of the Sedona Conference Working Group.

EXPERIENCE

- Mr. Matthews defended a German auto manufacturer in a business dispute involving Clemson University's research campus (CU-ICAR) in Greenville.
- He defended a manufacturer in a trial between the two largest competitors in a global market.

Having served in the Air Force as an engineer, managing deployments and construction projects in Bosnia and Saudi Arabia, Mr. Matthews was featured in a June, 2010, SC Biz magazine article titled, "Making a second career of the law."
